"It was the Queen's own idea."
said a Palace spokesman.
London newspapers had criticized the British Government for not arranging a full-scale V.I.P. welcome for the first man in space, who is here by invitation of the Soviet Trade Fair.

The Government took the position that Gagarin was making the trip as a private individual and no official red carpet need be rolled out.

An obscure civil servant, Mr. F. F. Turnbull, Secretary of the Science Ministry, was the official greeter on landing of a Soviet twin-jet airliner that brought Gagarin from Moscow.

The people of London, however, gave the 27-year-old astronaut a thunderous welcome. They cheered and applauded him for 15 miles from London airport to the Soviet Embassy.
